Description

My home is a place where I surround myself with the things and people I love. It's also a place where I can be myself, sing at the top of my lungs, scream, dream, love and create. It's also an ever evolving place. I'm constantly thinking of new ways to use my space or the next color I'd like to paint a room. Even though I've lived in the same house for almost 13 years it has had many different looks. It's important for me to change my surroundings as I gain new perspectives or ideas. Call me crazy, but I find if my house is stagnant I become stagnant. I think when you walk into someone's home it should tell you something about that person.
