

Gratitude Monday

Description

It has been a full week since my last post and blogger has made a few changes. I will start by saying I'm grateful I figured out how to write a post with their new design because I'm not too computer savvy. I'm also happy I figured out how to restart my iPhone 4 after it locked up on me today.

My daughter broke her wrist last week at track practice after jumping a hurdle. We almost made it through the season without an injury, but I'm thankful it was a clean break. It could have been a lot worse and I'm grateful it wasn't. I should also add I'm grateful my husband got the call from the school before me. He is more level headed and not as reactive as I am in stressful situations.

I'm grateful for the show Game of Thrones. I just finished watching season one with my husband on demand. We rarely watch television series together. He likes to channel surf and we don't always like the same shows. I love the story line of the show and the acting. However, I could do without some of the graphic violence and sex scenes. They don't leave too much to the imagination.

Although I've started making it a point to list random things I'm grateful for on Mondays it was pointed out to me by my daughter that I could use the book 14,000 Things To Be Happy About. I guess it's time to start a daily gratitude journal again.

Date Created

2012/05/01

Author

queenie