

Nesting

Description

Birds nest in the tree in front of my house.

My nesting instinct is beginning in preparation for the cold months ahead. As the leaves begin to fall from the trees and the daylight hours turn shorter I feel compelled to light candles and slow down. The busy pace of the holidays is quickly approaching. I feel a need to organize a little and start sorting through recipes and craft ideas I'd like to make. If I don't establish some sort of a plan time passes and I haven't accomplished anything. This weekend's project is to organize my hall closet and assess our coat situation. My children are still growing so they inevitably need a new coat every year. I'm usually scrambling at the last minute to buy one because they don't see the need for a coat unless it's below zero. I'm sure there are other mothers out there who can relate. Have you begun any nesting rituals?

Date Created

2012/11/03

Author

queenie

default watermark