

Somewhere Over The Rainbow

Description

I got an email last Monday from my friend Amy in Newtown, Connecticut saying that her and her daughter Jane would be traveling to New York City to be on Good Morning America the following day. It was hush hush at the time, but I set my recorder last Tuesday and was touched by the performance of "Somewhere Over The Rainbow" by a group of children from Newtown and folk singer Ingrid Michaelson. Most of the children attend Sandy Hook, but Jane is one of the middle schoolers. She is in the back row wearing a yellow cardigan at the Good Morning America studio. I wanted to share this because it makes me smile to see how these kids wanted to do something to help their community during this healing process. They used their beautiful little voices to send a message of hope with the song "Somewhere Over the Rainbow." In their own small way they are making a difference. You can purchase "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" on Itunes and proceeds go to their community.
