All of the recent snow days we've been having has equalled more television and movie time than normal. I wish I could say I've watched a lot of movies that I highly recommend, but I haven't. However, we recently watched Here Comes the Boom starring Kevin James and I was pleasantly surprised. This got me thinking about other movies that left me feeling inspired. I have many more that I could list, but these were the first ones that came to mind.

Here Comes The Boom This is a feel good movie where you root for the underdog. Kevin James is inspiring as a teacher who is determined to help a fellow music teacher keep his job. He believes in possibility where most people see the impossible, is determined, and displays perseverance despite tough times. The movie reminded me a little of Mr. Holland's Opus which I haven't seen in years.

Something's Gotta Give This movie inspires me from a visual standpoint. Diane Keaton's beach house provides all sorts of inspiration for coastal living. If you are interested in seeing photos of the real house check out Hooked on Houses. It's an addictive blog if you love looking at homes.

Hachi: A Dog's Tale This movie stars Richard Gere. If you don't own a dog, it will make you want to go buy one. Hachi is based on a true story about the unconditional love and loyalty of a dog. Be sure to have a box of tissues handy.

Hotel Rwanda Don Cheadle's performance as a hotel manager is inspirational. It's based on the true account of the Rwandan Genocide that happened in 1994. Be forewarned, it's very graphic and also a tear jerker. It was an eye opener to me in terms of world events.

Every once in a while I glean inspiration from movies, but I mostly enjoy them from an entertainment perspective. Two fun and maybe lesser known movies which are favorites of mine are A Knight's Tale and Duplex. If you enjoy movie trivia and learning more about movies check out the website IMBD.
Please leave a comment and share what movie is inspirational to you.
