Iâ€™m a t-shirt and jeans kind of gal, but sometimes it can be hard to find a good fitting t-shirt. My friend Diane would question how I could possibly need another t-shirt, but they are essentials in my wardrobe. I can never have enough t-shirts.

Theyâ€™re comfortable, versatile and easy to dress up with a fun necklace or scarf. I typically donâ€™t like to spend a lot of money on them. After a season or two Iâ€™ve found they need to be replaced regardless of how much Iâ€™ve spent.

With that being said, if theyâ€™re too cheap, they donâ€™t even last through the summer months.

I began my search for the perfect t-shirt last month. I went to my favorite stores first and left empty handed. My friend Christine suggested I try JCPenney. I donâ€™t shop their very often, but Iâ€™ve noticed they are starting to carry better merchandise. To my surprise I came out with at least six new t-shirts and went back for more. I purchased the above styles. The a.n.a brand and JCP scoop neck both have a little spandex in them which I like. The slub t-shirt is a little softer and more forgiving. There are a plethora of styles, colors and cottons to choose from. If you still havenâ€™t found the perfect t-shirt for this summer give JCPenney a try. You canâ€™t beat the price they are on sale for roughly $8 a piece. Do you have a favorite or trustworthy brand of t-shirt? If so, please leave me a comment.
