

Talenti Gelato

Description

default watermark

source Talenti

In case you haven't noticed, I have an obsession with anything that is made with the combination of sea salt and caramel. I particularly like the two ingredients when they are combined with chocolate.

While we were on vacation in England we passed several places that sold gelato. One of the gals on our tour would order gelato every opportunity she got. I've had gelato before, but there's nothing like eating it in Italy or a country like England full of Italians. We ate at some really good Italian restaurants while we were in England, but I never got around to trying the gelato. It was one of the things I regretted not ordering.

When I returned from my trip I received a text from my friend Mary telling me to buy Talenti's Sea Salt Caramel Gelato. My gelato fix has now been taken care of and I no longer have any regrets.

Talenti's Sea Salt Caramel Gelato is heavenly. It glided off my spoon with ease as I scooped it out of its clear plastic container. No muscle or special ice cream scoop required. Talenti Gelato comes in several different flavors such as chocolate peanut butter cup, chocolate mint and banana chocolate swirl to name a few. Talenti also makes sorbets. I haven't tried the sorbet yet.

Talenti's gelatos are made with fresh hormone free milk and only pure cane sugar. They also have 30% less fat than regular ice cream. Talenti is sold at Target, Price Chopper, and most major grocery stores. If you click on the link to their website it lists all of the stores where it's sold.

This is my own personal opinion and I wasn't compensated in any way for this post. If Talenti would like to send me some free gelato though I'll gladly take it.

Date Created

2013/07/29

Author

queenie