

The Sandwich Dilemma

Description

Back to school time equates to packing school lunches for a lot of moms. Fortunately my kids are in high school and like to buy their lunch now. There was a time though where I packed my daughter's lunch almost every single day except on bosco stick days. When I was in grade school my mother made a salami sandwich for me practically every day of the week. It was my father's favorite lunchmeat. I ate so many salami sandwiches as a kid that I didn't eat it for years afterward. Every once in awhile a peanut butter and marshmellow fluff sandwich was thrown in. I have never tired of peanut butter and marshmellow sandwiches or PB & J in general. Oddly enough, salami is my daughter's lunchmeat of choice and peanut butter sandwiches. For more ideas on peanut butter sandwiches check out Tori Spelling's blog post 10 Ways to Spice Up Your Kids PB & J.

My kids current favorite sandwich is from The Chew. I wrote about it in a past post here, but felt like it needed repeating. The key to this sandwich is Mango Chutney, Boar's Head quality roast beef, cheddar cheese, and a fresh baguette. I'm not the mom who packs gourmet lunches for her kids, but I make this sandwich sometimes on the weekends for lunch or even for a quick dinner. I hope you enjoy it! For more sandwich inspiration check out my soup and sandwiches pinterest board. What's your favorite sandwich?

Date Created
2013/08/20
Author
queenie