

The 6:00 AM Solution

Description

default watermark

I love how answers can come to us in the strangest of ways sometimes. I've had answers to prayers and questions show up through people, books, ideas, magazines and countless other ways. I most recently had the answer to a problem literally wake me up at 6:00 am.

It all started the day before. My friend Anne was telling me how her iPhone text messages hadn't been going through since she installed the new Apple iOS 7 update on her iPhone. I explained that mine was working just fine. Evidently though iPhone users have been experiencing problems since installing iOS 7. My son actually updated my phone because if it were up to me it would probably never happen. I'm notorious for hitting the not now button when an update message pops up on my computer screen.

That same afternoon I started having problems with sending text messages. I called Anne to tell her she jinxed me. That's the kind of friend I am. She told me to shut my phone completely off and turn it back on. Thankfully my texts started working again.

The next morning our alarm goes off at 6:00 AM which I'm typically not very happy about. The alarm is set to MIX 93.3 and I awake to our local DJ's discussing the new iPhone iOS 7 and problems with text messaging. The DJ's advice was to turn off messaging then turn off your phone. Then turn them both back on. It was clear as day. Still half asleep, I looked over at my husband and said what are the chances of that happening? I had only done half of the solution. Before I even got out of bed my wonderful husband took care of the rest.

If I ever have any doubts, little moments like this reassure me that there is a higher power listening. Have answers to problems ever come to you in strange ways?

Date Created

2013/10/05

Author

queenie