

Favorite Thanksgiving Ideas

Description

Thanksgiving is in two weeks and Iâ€™m thankful I donâ€™t have to host dinner this year. What are you thankful for? My friend Stacey at Likes to Smile has been posting what sheâ€™s grateful for on twitter. If youâ€™d like to play along just tweet something youâ€™re grateful for and use the hashtag #gratitudetweets. Even though Iâ€™m not hosting Thanksgiving at my house this year I realize many of you are. If youâ€™re a regular reader of my blog you know how I love to collect ideas on Pinterest. These are a few of my favorite ideas I came across. Please click on the link for the details of each project. For the whole collection you can pin my post or go to the projectâ€™s site to pin the details.

Also, in case you missed it Seana from The Seana Method wrote a post for me with a detailed Thanksgiving planning guide. Itâ€™s a great step by step guide to help you prepare for out-of-town guests and the Thanksgiving meal. I donâ€™t know about you, but Iâ€™m a list maker. I like to have everything written down otherwise I easily forget things.

gluten-free

turkey cookies

with leftover Halloween candy

default watermark

Gluten-Free Turkey Cookie by The Centsible Life

default watermark

Free Thanksgiving printables by The 36th Avenue

default watermark

Gilded Gourds by Home Is Where The Boat Is

DIY Burlap Utensil Holder by Uncommon Designs

Mini Cornucopia Favors by Live Laugh Rowe

Turkey Cheeseball from Taste of Home

Pumpkin Rolls from Thistlewood Farms

It's little touches like the projects I've featured above that add a bit of joy to the holidays. There isn't a lot of extra time around the holidays to embark on long and drawn out projects. I felt like most of these ideas were fairly simple and even if you just incorporated one into your Thanksgiving tradition it might put a smile on someone's face. I'm going to make the turkey cheese ball since I'm not hosting this year. How about you? Do one of these projects strike your fancy?

I've been collecting a ton of ideas for fall. You can check out my pinterest board here for more inspiration.

Date Created

2013/11/14

Author

queenie

default watermark