

Favorite Finds- Signs, Sam's Club and Books

I was surprised to find my neighbor carving this welcome home sign into a snow drift last weekend. His girlfriend had been out-of-town over Valentine's Day weekend and he spent all day preparing the snow, carving out the letters and spraying paint through a straw to color the letters. It wasn't a nice warm day either, as you can see from the huge mound of snow. If this isn't an act of love, I don't know what is. It put a smile on my face and made my husband grumble. Coming home to a nice clean house and no laundry is pretty sweet as well, which I can say my husband has done on many occasions.

Sam's Club Finds by dpasco featuring food storage containers I also ventured out to Sam's Club over the weekend which can be dangerous. I went in needing paper products and $300 later came out with much more. I don't need another item for entertaining, but I couldn't pass up this Mango Leaf 3 Tier Swivel Server for only $25. I also found this set of 3 glass canisters with slate tags for $20. I'm not sure what I'm going to put in them yet, but they were too cute to pass up. They were two items that I knew I'd regret not purchasing. I've learned that timing is everything when it comes to finding good deals. Good deals usually don't last long. I can also justify almost anything trying to stay out of the stores a little more this winter. I need nothing else for my home, but I always manage to find something, even at Sam's Club. I've been doing a little more reading. I recently read The War of Art and Divergent. I saw Oprah's interview with Author, Steven Pressfield on Oprah's Super Soul Sundayshow and enjoyed it so much that I bought the book. The War of Art examines the internal obstacles we encounter when creating and gives tools to help conquer resistance. It's a pretty short read, but a book that I'll probably have to reread to grasp the full understanding. Divergent was a fun read and despite its size, a very quick read because I didn't want to put it down. If you liked The Hunger Games, you will love Divergent. I'm currently reading Insurgent which is the second in the three book series. I normally don't read science fiction, but I'm enjoying these series. The Divergent movie is coming out next month and I can't wait. Have you read any good books this winter? Any favorite finds? I'm looking forward to spring and fresh new discoveries!
