

My Favorite Bunnies

Description

photo via Pottery Barn

Spring is finally here according to the calendar. However, spring weather in Kansas ranges anywhere from the 35-70 degrees. One day its 60 and the next day we may have snow flurries. I finally decorated my home for spring and with that comes bunnies. I love all of the cute bunnies that can be found in stores this time of year. Originally I had several picked out from different stores that I was going to feature, but they have already been sold out. However, this cute little cupcake stand from Pottery Barn isnâ€™t sold out and is my absolute favorite. Last year they had a similar one which I hymned and hawed about buying and by the time I was ready to order it they were sold out. This year I ordered it right away and even purchased two more for friends. The best bunnies cupcake stand is only $14.99 and free shipping!

I have always loved rabbits until they started eating my flowers. Our family used to have a black bunny rabbit my son named Hoppy. Hoppy later went to live with one of my childrenâ€™s elementary school teachers and would visit the school every spring for the story of The Velveteen Rabbit. I also had a pet bunny when I was kid which lived in an outdoor cage. What no one tells you is that these cute little furry creatures are more maintenance then they appear to be. If you plan on keeping your rabbit indoors, they like to chew cords and anything else they can get their teeth on.

This cute little best bunnies cupcake stand makes me smile every time I look it and itâ€™s low maintenance!

Date Created

2014/03/26

Author

queenie

default watermark