

Fairy Houses Spread Joy

Description

default watermark

It was a beautiful spring day last Thursday and I decided to skip the gym and go for a walk instead. My friend and I walked a nature trail which backs up to a little farmstead called Deanna Rose which is in the middle of suburbia. When my kids were younger we visited the farmstead at least once a week. I could write a whole blog post about Deanna Rose Farmstead, but today's post is about little treasures I discovered on my walk. These treasures are little acts of love and kindness that someone (or possibly several people) have left along the nature trail. We came across about five or six fairy/gnome houses built inside trees and hollowed out logs. Several had positive messages written on stones or inside the house. I had my iPhone with me and snapped tons of pictures. I was so excited to come across these little houses that I knew I had to share them.

The door opening to this house reads, kindness begins with me.

These houses werenâ€™t just thrown up in a few minutes. You can tell by looking at all of the pictures that some were constructed out of wood and someone had to measure for doors and screw hinges on them. This is the inside of one of the fairy/gnome houses. It even has a little Easter decoration displayed.

I was so impressed with these little doors. I wish I knew who made them because I would have them make one for my home.

I loved this little surprise inside the house. Someone built a cute stone mantle and displayed artwork above it.

I also loved this tree house complete with a hammock and a plastic plane in the corner. Someone has a clever sense of humor!

I hope these little houses made you smile! Kindness is contagious. Go out and spread some kindness today!

Iâ€™m sorry to say that the Fairy Houses Iâ€™ve pictured are no longer on the trail. They were taken down by the person that made them because they moved out of the area. Iâ€™m not sure why they felt the need to take the items with them, but hopefully some other good Samaritan will create new ones.

Update as of May 8, 2105. A short documentary titled "The Gnomist" will premeire May 9 about these little fairy houses and the profound affect they had on several people in the community.

Date Created

2014/04/14

Author

queenie

default watermark