8 great wines

My friend Anne is passionate about wine like I am about desserts. I've always enjoyed the many different wines she has shared with me over the years. She has great taste when it comes to wine so I invited her to share some of her favorite white and red wines. I think the saying "you get what you pay for" can be true of some wines, but there are many affordable options which are excellent. I thought this would be a good week for Anne to share some of her selections in case you are looking to purchase a special bottle for Valentine's Day.

I have been drinking wine for about fifteen years now and have really become passionate about good wines. One of my favorite things to do is share a great bottle with family and friends. I love how even just one glass can really get the conversation going and get the evening or meal off to a great start. In my experience, wine has a way of conjuring up great memories. A good comparison to help explain this is how a certain song can bring you back to a specific moment or time. A good glass of wine has absolutely the same effect on my brain as a great song. I believe this is why wine has become one of my passions, it has the ability to remind me of fun times in my past.

I compiled a list of some of my favorite wines. The wines I have chosen I consider some of my "go to" wines. This just means if I see them on a menu I know I will be pleased if I order any one of them, by the bottle or just one glass. They are also wines I feel very confident sharing with friends.

Hopefully, you will see one on my list that you'd like to try. I would love for you to share any wine recommendations you have too! I am always eager to taste new wines, and I'm looking forward to making new memories that include wine! After all, it is February, the perfect month to make a sweet memory with the one you love!

Happy wine tasting and memory making!! Anne
