

The Summer Wind

Description

Labor Day is fast approaching and soon the summer winds will turn into the crisp winds of fall. I often resist change; however, there are times when I really look forward to it. Iâ€™m always ready to welcome a change in the seasons. Not so much winter, but I do enjoy a nice snowfall every now and then. A month or two of winter weather is plenty for me. I look forward to the colors of fall, pumpkins, wearing jackets, watching my daughter play in the marching band, crisp mornings, and comfort foods.

joyfulscribblings.com

joyfulscribblings.com

This summer was full of simple joys like going to a few Kansas City Royals Baseball games. Hopefully we will continue to watch them in the playoffs this fall and maybe even another World Series.

I also enjoyed fresh vegetables from friends and family’s gardens, taking walks with my dog, vacation getaways, cucumber gin fizzes, grilled hot dog and hamburgers, spending time at the lake with friends and family, and reading some good books. My goal is to make it to the farmer’s market this weekend. I haven’t been all summer and I want to be sure to check it out before they close up for the season.

What are some of the simple joys you enjoyed this summer or what is something you’d like to do before summer officially ends? Here’s a little Frank Sinatra to get you feeling nostalgic. Have a great holiday weekend!

Date Created

---

2015/09/03

Author
queenie

default watermark