Itâ€™s the most wonderful time of the year, but not because kids are jingle belling and everyone telling you â€œbe of good cheerâ€œ. Itâ€™s because of why we celebrate Christmas in the first place, the birth of Christ. I get so wrapped up in gift buying and present wrapping that I sometimes forget whose birthday it is.

I will be taking a little break from my blog and social media over the holidays to spend time with my family. Every year I take time to reflect on the past year and set goals for the new year. The nice thing about the new year is you have the opportunity to start all over again. If things didn't go your way in 2015, it's a new year filled with new possibilities.

Every year I choose a word to focus on. You can read all about the One Little Word concept here. I've already got my word picked out for 2016 which I'll share with you in a future post. I'm also working on a calendar for 2016 which will feature a Live Curiously Challenge each month. I hope you'll follow along with me and get out of your box and try something new. You can download my ebook here for some ideas to get you started.

I'm continually trying to keep things interesting for you as a reader and myself. I'm curious to know what types of posts you would find helpful. Please leave a comment or email me at dawn@joyfulscribbings.com. Have a wonderful holiday. I hope your celebrations are filled with faith, hope and lots of love!

On a side note: I created the above picture of my home in the country with the Waterlogue app. I'm not artistic so I love being able to create little works of art from my photos. I used this picture for my Christmas cards this year. You can read more about Waterlogue here.
